

19.10.2023, 6.15pm–7.45pm | Public Lecture
Unitobler, Lerchenweg 36, F021

Prof. Dr. Jennifer C. Nash

Jean Fox O'Barr Professor of Gender, Sexuality, and Feminist Studies, Duke University

Moderation:

Prof. Dr. Malika Maskarinec / Prof. Dr. Melanie Rohner

Modern German Literature, Institute of Germanic Languages and Literatures, University of Bern

Traveling Intersectionality

Three decades after the term intersectionality was coined, it has become the most prominent feminist intervention, traveling across disciplines and national boundaries, and across the oft-described theory/practice boundary. This is a talk that attempts to trace and assess that travel, to think about the meanings of intersectionality in a moment when the word is used by scholars, activists, artists, and practitioners on all sides of political conversations for myriad reasons. More than anything, I aspire to think about how this unprecedented travel makes us – feminists who feel an attachment to intersectionality – feel, and what those feelings might teach us about political desire.

Graduate School of the Arts and Humanities

in collaboration with Interdisziplinäres Zentrum für Geschlechterforschung (IZFG)

Graduate School Gender Studies

gsah.unibe.ch izfg.unibe.ch/studium/graduate_school/index_ger.html

u^b

b
UNIVERSITÄT BERN